SANK TO REST

Mrs. Richard T. Anderson Expired at Lexington Hospital Yesterday Morning—Was Born in Maysville.

(Friday's Lexington Leader.)

Mrs. Lottie R. Anderson, wife of Mr. Richard T. Anderson, capitalist and banker, died at the Good Samaritan Hospital at 11:30 o'clock today, following an illness of about two months.

While not unexpected, as she had been in a critical condition for several days, the death of Mrs. Anderson was a great shock to her family and large circle of friends who hoped against hope that her life would be spared.

All that medical science and the loving ministrations of her devoted husband, family and relatives could suggest was done in the hope of restoring her to health, but in vain. She gradually grew weaker until the end came.

Mrs. Anderson was before her marriage to Mr. Anderson about twelve years ago, Miss Lottie Respass, of Mason county, and besides her husband, she is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Respass, and two brothers, Messrs. Baldwin and Courtney Respass, all of this city. She was a niece of Mrs. W. E. McLean, and a granddaughter of Col. W. W. Keliwin, known before his death as the "Turnpike King of Kentucky."

Mrs. Anderson was bright, winning and gracious in manner, endearing herself to all who came within the circle of her acquaintanceship. She was a general favorite in Lexington society, and her beautiful home at 475 West Second street was pervaded by an atmosphere of brightness and vivacity that made it a delightful spot for her relatives and friends. It is particularly sad that one so amiable, gracious and popular should be taken away in the bloom of young womanhood, but it is only another exemplification that Death loves a shining mark. She will be greatly missed in all circles here, and the news of her death will carry sorrow to all who knew and loved her for her many graces of mind and heart.

The body was removed to the family residence on West Second street. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the burial will be in the Lexington cemetery.

The bereaved husband and family have the sympathy of the whole community in their irreparable loss.

Mr. Sam M. Hall of Forest avenue, went down to Cincinnati yesterday for a few days' visit.

"FATHER SHOT ROYSE"

Says Bud Thomas, a Negro Arrested For the Murder and Robbery of Nicholas County Farmer

Lexington, Ky., November 12.—According to the officers the story of the murder of C. T. Royse, a farmer who lived near Carlisle, was told to them this evening by Bud Thomas, a Negro, who, with his father, Dan Thomas, was brought to the Fayette county jail last night for fear of their being lynched, after a coroner's jury had declared they had committed the Royse murder. Thomas stated, the officers say, that his father killed Mr. Royse while he, the son, was present.

Thomas said his father told him to come with him, as he was going hunting. The father took with him a single-barreled shotgun, the son said. They went to the Royse place and out to the barn. A little later Mr. Royse appeared at the house, heated some water in an old stove that was in the yard and then came to the barn. The Negroes were standing around the corner and when he came up to them Dan Thomas said he had come to take his horse away. To this Mr. Royse replied, the Negro said, that he could not get it, as Thomas owed a bill of $50 to him. After a short conversation Dan Thomas raised the gun and fired, the shot taking effect in Mr. Royse's chest just below the neck. He was not killed by the first shot and the Negro reloaded the gun and shot him twice more.

Body Hidden In Woods. They then carried the dead man to the lumber pile in the woods where the body was found and went to town by a roundabout way, leaving the gun in a field some distance from the scene of the killing. Bud Thomas said that they took more than $300 from the dead man. He said that his father had repeatedly commanded him not to tell of the murder, and that since the inquest he had been especially persistent in his demands not to tell, and that on his way here yesterday in the automobile he warned him repeatedly to keep silent and that he woke him up several times last night in the jail and said: "Don't tell!"

Bud Thomas is apparently about 25 years old and his father about 50. Dan Thomas continues to deny all knowledge of the murder.

THE MOVIES MAKE YOU BLUSH.

It was passed by the Ohio State Board of Censors all right—at least the film was so labeled. There were about 50 per cent. children attending and the picture was shown last Saturday night. Boccaccio might have planned it. As the story ran a young couple were in love, but the girl's parents refused to invite the young man to a week-end party. So, at the suggestion of the girl, the boy dressed up in girl's clothes and attended the party. There were one or two scenes of the Heptameron kind, but the juveniles yelled with appreciative delight at one scene where the mother, meeting the boy in skirts, said, "We are a little crowded and you must share a bed with my daughter."

What I want to know is, where were the Censors? You see what you are up against, do you not? If a saloon ran that kind of a thing as a side show the yell of protest would be heard from Dan to Beersheba.—Jack Random in Ripley Bee.

BETTER PENROSE THAN APOSTLES OF NOTHING

Pennsylvania is satisfied with Penrose, but Pennsylvania was satisfied with Quay in times past.—Louisville Post.

Pennsylvania is satisfied with Penrose because he represents Republican Protection, sound money and all the other national policies that has made the United States the foremost power in the world, despite the tremendous handicap of Bryan and his pack of theorists.

Penrose may have a chocolate reputation, but he's there with the political and economic punch and in the language of the average American citizen, he "delivers the goods."

OLD CUSTOM STILL SURVIVES

Austrian Peasants Retain the Subserviency That Was Enforced During Days of Feudalism.

While I was the guest of Prince A. at his Austrian castle, writes a contributor to Chambers' Journal, Princess Karl took me under her special guidance. She insisted that I should make acquaintance with the village the morning after my arrival.

"You had better put on gloves, or at any rate the right-hand glove," she said, as I met her at the great entrance.

"I never wear gloves if I can help it," I answered. "And on a hot day like this!"

She laughed. "Well, I have warned you. You must buy your experience."

We descended the steep slope to the village, and stopped at the post office; it was likewise a cafe and a general provision store. Several peasants sat at a table drinking beer, and two or three women were talking with the postmistress. When we entered, the postmistress ran from behind her counter, the peasants rose from their bench, and crowding round the Princess Karl, they all kissed her right hand. To my intense surprise, after they had kissed the princess' hand, they each bestowed a similar attention on me.

"I warned you to wear a glove," said the princess, when the ceremony was over. "Now you know the reason. You will find that whenever you meet peasants, they will kiss your hand. They even leave their work in the fields, and run out into the road if they see you passing. Last year a young attaché from the French embassy was staying here, and he had a great fright. He was walking along a road between some bean fields. The peasants were taking in the harvest, and to his horror he saw them all, men and women, suddenly throw down their scythes and rakes and rush toward him from both sides. He was convinced that they were going to attack and rob him; and so he took to his heels and ran. He never stopped until he got to the Schloss; to this day he will not believe that the poor peasants only wished to kiss his hand as a mark of respect to an excellency. At my home in Hungary the peasants kneel down and kiss the hem of your dress."

In these days such subservience seems incredible; but the custom is a survival of the days when all the peasants were slaves, and the nobles had the power of life and death over them.

Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman ordered his office removed from Frankfort to Louisville to fight the cattle plague.

Nine out of fourteen National Banks in Boston voted against participating in the $135,000,000 cotton pool. Two voted for it.

The effort to prove the validity of the 1910 or earlier will of Lillian Nor-dica was begun by her husband in New Jersey.

WOULD AID COTTON GROWERS

Flour-Milling Firm Urges Its Customers to Accept Deliveries of Product in Cotton Sacks.

In order to increase the demand for cotton, one of the largest flour-milling firms in America has directed its managers and salesmen all over the country to urge its customers to accept deliveries of flour that are shipped in cotton instead of jute sacks. Hitherto jute imported from India has been used extensively for shipments of flour, both to home and foreign markets. The sacks employed hold 140 pounds each. If the trade can be induced to accept shipments in cotton sacks holding 98 pounds each, there will be a marked increase in the demand for home-grown cotton, and the action of the flour-milling firm is regarded as a long step in this direction. Anything that will improve the financial condition of the cotton growers, it is pointed out, will increase the volume of their cash purchases and thus benefit general business conditions. For this reason it is believed that the trade will not insist on the jute sacks used hitherto.

One Result of War of 1812.

One hundred years ago the War of 1812 had virtually closed so far as the operations in the North were concerned. Henceforth the activities of the opposing forces were to be confined to the South. The hope of obtaining the Floridas had encouraged the Southern states to enter into the war. The president had expected congress to approve the seizure of Spanish Florida. Andrew Jackson, as the most prominent military man in the South, was appointed major general of militia. Congress was at first reluctant to act in the matter of Florida, which belonged to Spain, a friendly power. But at last a bill was signed authorizing the seizing of Western Florida and the occupation of Mobile, Pensacola and other points. Shortly afterward Pensacola was captured. This was the only gain of territory made during the war.

Important Inheritance Decision.

A suit involving the right of a husband to the life use of real estate left by his wife was heard by the appellate division of the supreme court in Yung vs. Blake, in which it appeared that Anna Louise Yung, who died in 1906, left certain real estate. Her will made no provision for her husband nor for an infant daughter by her marriage to him, who was born after the will was executed. The court held that under the laws of New York the child was entitled to the same share of the estate it would have received if the mother had died intestate, and that by reason of this fact the father had the life use of the property inherited by the child.

Author's Unique Find.
Before Earnest Coppel buried himself in the oblivion of a Canadian forest he found one friend among humankind.
Lee Wok, the taciturn laundryman, was unwrapping the last boiled shirt the author would ever wear. Coppel suddenly grasped him by his cotton shoulder and looked searching into the celestial's narrow eyes.
"Tell me," he pleaded, "did you ever hear of a poem called 'When Willie Came to Say Good-Night?'"
Lee Wok shook his high-cheeked head in unconcern.
"Me no sabee," he mumbled.

Much Money Is Wasted.
Americans spend $20 for alcoholic liquors for every $1 that buys tea and coffee. Our tobacco costs five times as much as our new churches, remarks Gerard in the Philadelphia Ledger.
Every time we give $1 to a heathen we hand out $1.10 for chewing gum. Candy takes from our pockets two and one-half times as much as our medicines, which is truly fortunate.
It is said that Americans spend an average of $8 a year for jewelry, but I don't believe it. Our total imports of precious stones are only about fifty cents a year for each inhabitant. All the silver and the gold which are mined on earth in a year added to those precious stones does not equal $8 a head.

Power Trawl Fishers' Success.
The adoption of power trawl vessels for fishing in many parts of the world has been frequently described in Daily Consular and Trade Reports. At Hull, England, all previous records in connection with the local fishing industry were broken on September 23 by the trawler Dane. The vessel had fished off the coast of Iceland and its catch realized $9,000, or $1,000 more than the previous record figure. In this instance, however, the owners were helped by the keen demand for fish from London.

SOME GOOD FOUND IN WAR

Causes More Thought to Be Given to the Beauty of the Ordinary Things of Life.

Commenting on the fact that the war in Europe has caused a revival of the religious spirit in France and that a similar revival of religious feeling is reported from other countries engaged in the great conflict, the Chicago Sunday Herald says editorially: This is not strange. In the face of the terrific fact of world-wide war, not only religion but also art, literature, life and all sights and sounds and shades of beauty must have taken on an added value.

The peasant's vine-embowered cottage, the little vineyard in the South, the simple rounds of daily life—things which seemed a matter of course three months ago—must now seem beyond all measure valuable.

Fatherhood, motherhood and all the intimacies of family life so rudely cut by war—how incredibly high, holy and important they must seem now that separation has come to know exactly what they meant to all!

In ordinary times men take life, love, religion, culture. They take them as mere incidents of the common way, as things which no one need dwell too fondly on. Then suddenly there comes a crisis and they see them in a different light.

Truly of religion, art and all forms of beauty that move and breathe upon the world it may be said:
But you were not so fair, nor so could move.
Were it not your beauty, wonder-sweet, had caught
An added splendor from the face of death?

Usefulness of Hypatia

When it was finally decided to tear down the old building in one back room of which Mr. Bellamy and several of his cronies had met on Thursday evenings to play skat and enjoy other festivities appropriate to the occasion, the burning question of the hour became what to do with the club house cat.

"One of you fellows," said the man who owned the house and incidentally had owned the cat, "ought to take care of her. Hypatia is a good cat and fine looking. It would be a shame to turn her out into the street with no home and no friends. Bellamy, she has always been fond of you. What's the matter with your taking her?"

"Me?" exclaimed Bellamy. "Me? Good Lord! My wife hates cats." "Meow!" interrupted Hypatia, and rubbed patches of her new summer garments off on the leg of his trousers. Bellamy softened at that mark of confidence.

"Never mind, old girl," he said, "I won't go back on you. We'll go up to the house together and see what we can do."

Bellamy carried Hypatia home in a hat box. Mrs. Bellamy viewed the bundle with suspicion and alarm. "What have you there?" she asked. "Just a little surprise," said Bellamy lamely.

He raised the lid of the box and Hypatia, released from her unwonted confinement, jumped half way across the room.

"A cat!" she cried. "Why, Harvey, that is a cat. What did you bring her here for?"

"To kill the mice," said Bellamy. "Mice?" she echoed. "Why, there isn't a mouse about the place." "There isn't?" said Bellamy excitedly. "Great Scott, haven't you heard 'em? Why, the way they ram page through the walls every night playing golf and baseball is enough to wake the dead. I haven't been able to sleep for a week on account of the racket. That's the reason I got Hypatia. I want her to kill them off."

So for one night at least Hypatia was permitted to enjoy the hospitality of the Bellamys. The next morning Bellamy took his time at dressing. His wife, being curious concerning the welfare of her unwelcome guest, preceded him to the store room where Hypatia had been quartered for the night, and cautiously opened the door. As Hypatia rushed out she looked in and straightway sounded a ringing call to arms. Bellamy bolted down the hall from one direction and the cook from the other.

"What is the matter?" they asked. "A mouse!" responded Mrs. Bellamy, weakly, and keeled over against the wall. Bellamy held the rodent at arm's length and flourished it by the tip of the tail triumphantly.

"What did I tell you?" he said. "Didn't I say the house is alive with them?"

"Yes," admitted his wife. "It's funny I never heard them, though. I suppose we'll have to keep Hypatia an other night now."

Immediately after breakfast Mrs. Bellamy summoned the janitor and pointed to the moribund mouse.

"Henry," she said severely, "what is that?"
A look of consternation overspread the big Swede's infantile face.

"A maas," he gasped. "A maas Where you got them?"

If the cultivation of mice in a private apartment had been the height of human ambition Mrs. Bellamy could have betrayed exultation no more complete than that which thrilled her voice as she replied:
"Here. Right here in our own flat I want you to clean out my storeroom and take up my carpets and rugs and stop all the rat holes. The things will eat us alive if we don't get rid of them."

Although the bewildered Swede worked until bedtime tearing up carpets and moving furniture, neither mice nor their means of egress and ingress were discovered. Nevertheless that night Hypatia slew two more of her hereditary foes.

"I am going out this afternoon to look for a fat. I can't stand it to be eaten by mice," said Mrs. Bellamy. She really did start, but she got no further than her own hall door when she met a boy who wanted to see Mr. Bellamy.

"What do you want to see him about?" she asked.

"Oh, nothin' much," was the vague reply.

Mrs. Bellamy opened the door to the widest limit.

"Little boy," she said, with seductive graciousness, "wouldn't you like a dish of pudding and some fruit?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the boy.

She entertained him for half an hour. As a result of the interview she abandoned her intention of looking for another fat.

"I am glad of that," said Bellamy that evening when apprised of her decision. "Where is Hypatia?"

The distilled sweetness of Mrs. Bellamy's voice was positively cloying.

"I gave her," she said, "to little Billy Moses. He was up here this afternoon to see if you want him to deliver any more dead mice, and to collect for those he has already furnished. He says his father's shop is overrun with them, and I thought he might find Hypatia useful."

A CONFESSION

Hopes Her Statement, Made Public, will Help Other Women.

Hines, Ala.—"I must confess," says Mrs. Eula Mae Reid, of this place, "that Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done me a great deal of good."

Before I commenced using Cardui, I would spit up everything I ate. I had a tired, sleepy feeling all the time, and was irregular. I could hardly drag around, and would have severe headaches continuously.

Since taking Cardui, I have entirely quit spitting up what I eat. Everything seems to digest all right, and I have gained 10 pounds in weight."

If you are a victim of any of the numerous ills so common to your sex, it is wrong to suffer.
For half a century, Cardui has been relieving just such ills, as is proven by the thousands of letters, similar to the above, which pour into our office, year by year. Cardui is successful because it is composed of ingredients which act specifically on the womanly constitution, and helps build the weakened organs back to health and strength.

Cardui has helped others, and will help you, too. Get a bottle today. You won't regret it. Your druggist sells it.

CAVE DWELLERS OF AMERICA

Europe is by No Means the Exclusive Holder of Prehistoric Dwellings.

The American cave dwellers were not ape men, nor even big-jawed, low-browed meat eaters, like the alleged associates of the famous, albeit anonymous, owner of the "Neanderthal skull." Corn and squash seeds, three kinds of gourds, the stone waste, and the slender bones of birds tell of the largely vegetable diet of these prehistoric cave dwellers.

Evidence of religious worship about—little estufas, with places for the sacred fire among the dwellings, and large ovens in the open canyon where circles of communal huts, inclose the central floor, hardened by the feet of thousands of dancers.

Here, still unexplored, are hundreds of tiny cavern houses burrowed in cliffs 500 to 600 feet high, colored in mauve, ochre, sober gray and gypsum white—hues that in the sunset glow in furnace reds and royal purple and deep lavender.

Not far away at Casa Grande, a race of tall men lived in larger caves and left their mummified dead to tell of six-foot braves and broad-shouldered women, while at Pikesville the bodies dimly gleam with here and there a swathed in woven cloths of wattle-warrior. Reservoirs to impound water for siege or drought; ditches for irrigation; pictographs that are a mélange of bird and reptile, beasts and weird imitations of the human form; pottery in shards and unbroken; splintered bows and feathered arrows; fiber-soled sandals, and blankets thickened with rabbit fur are found in some of these ancient cavern houses.—National Magazine.

Protested War With England.
One hundred years ago Massachusetts sent a circular letter to the other New England states inviting them to send delegates to a convention in Hartford to protest against the continuance of the war with England. The presence of the British and the demoralization of the shipping had long weighed heavily on the people of New England. While the loyalty and patriotism of the citizens were never in question, there was a certain element, made up principally of the political opponents of President Madison, who were confirmed in their hostility to the war. It was said at the time that their opposition went so far as to contemplate secession or obstruction to the government in prosecuting the war, but this was stoutly denied by those responsible for the Hartford convention.

Land Engagement in 1812.
One hundred years ago the Americans and British met in a skirmish at Lyons Creek, near the Niagara frontier. This was the last long engagement fought in the North in the War of 1812. The action was between several detachments of United States regulars, with a small party of dragoons and riflemen, about nine hundred men in all, and a select British corps of 1,300 men. The British made the attack, and after some sharp fighting were repulsed with considerable loss. The loss on the American side amounted to 68 killed, wounded and missing. Soon after this date the American army, after destroying Fort Erie, retired across the border and went into winter quarters at Buffalo, Black Rock and Batavia.

GREAT NEED FOR COURTESY

Matter Really Costs Very Little, Yet It Means So Much to the Recipient.

After the nations of the world have proved that they are through with war by instituting universal disarmament, the great reform next in order will be that of instituting universal courtesy. This reform may be said to be on its feet, even at the present time, but it is wobbly-legged and needs a great deal of encouragement.

We have some very courteous individuals in our midst, most of whom were born that way and who insist on staying that way despite all temptations to the contrary; but we have some who are almost hopeless.

Courtesy is just another name for unselfishness. The greedy, self-centered individual is never courteous, no matter what kind of manners he displays in public. Courtesy does not reveal itself for effect; it is not calculating. It acts out of the promptings of consideration for the just claims and rights of others, and in smaller matters at least, it is even willing to make sacrifices. It is the sense of service revealed in action.

When you give your neighbor a smile instead of a frown you do him a real service, for you cause him to smile and be happy. It is courteous, therefore, to smile.

When you smother the needless word of criticism you save some one a pang. It is courteous, therefore, to control your tongue.

It doesn't matter very much at just what angle you tip your hat to a lady, although it is commendable to regard such points. The important thing is to look like you were glad of the opportunity to tip it. That is the real courtesy.

If the world would start out today to follow two rules—smile and avoid mean gossip—it would be almost civilized at the end of a year.

COULDN'T ATTEND TO BOTH

Grocery Clerk Found That Putting Up Orders and Talking Baseball Didn't Go Together.

The manager of a large Portland (Ore.) grocery store took great pleasure in relating a few "plays" pulled off by one of his clerks. This clerk is a "fan." One of those absorbed, wild and woolly baseball lovers who can talk, expand and argue the great game at any time and anywhere. His duties at the store keep him anchored most of the time, though on special occasions he is assigned to the teams.

Among his duties is to put up orders for customers in the high-toned section of the city. While he was engaged in this work the other day one of his chums (also a "fan") came in and they began to talk baseball. The grocery clerk kept on putting up the orders, but his thoughts were all on that important subject, baseball.

In the course of his argument he went to the shelf and got a case of starch instead of a package of sugar; put up tomatoes instead of potatoes, put in a bag of flour in place of an order for lard; read maple sirup instead of condensed milk, and would have drawn molasses into the kerosene can if some one had not called him away for a moment as he started for the molasses barrel.

For a time this was the way that his orders went out and it caused a riot among three or four of the best customers. He is still a good deal of a "fan," but he is not going to put up any orders while engrossed in his favorite subject.

ALLIES FORCE GERMANS BACK FOUR MILES

Paris, Nov. 13.—From the Lys to the sea the battle of Flanders was carried to the Germans today, the French, British and Belgians having resumed the offensive at several points as soon as the energy of the German effort gave signs of being spent.

Ypres was the center of the most ferocious fighting.

An aggregate gain of nearly four miles was made by the allies' attack.

ENGLAND MOBILIZING TWO MILLION MEN.

London, Nov. 13.—Parliament will probably be asked next Tuesday to sanction the raising of 1,000,000 additional troops and a war loan of $1,000,000,000, or more, probably at four per cent, redeemable in ten years. The government may also propose to raise a further $250,000,000 by increasing various forms of taxation. The additional troops would give Great Britain an army of 2,000,000 men in the field.

BOY BURNS FATHER'S BARN AND VALUABLE CONTENTS.

(Mt. Olivet Advance)

Tuesday while his aged grandmother was preparing dinner the 5-year-old son of Mr. William Stitt of near Alambra got hold of some matches at the house and went out to the barn to play. Our readers can almost guess the rest. Soon afterward some inflammable material was ablaze and the boy was unable to extinguish it.

The barn and contents were rapidly consumed. Mr. Stitt's crop of tobacco, two horses, buggy, wagon, plows and other farm machinery were a total loss.

The father and mother of the boy were away from the house at the time.

COME To the Scene of Action

These war correspondents have so much interesting news to write that it's hard for them to abbreviate to cablegram limits. We likewise have so much to tell about our

That we can't even begin in this space. Better come to the scene of action in our store and review in person the beautiful models and patterns that we have mobilized here.

21,976 FORDS SOLD IN SEPTEMBER!

The Ford Motor Co., announces that in the month of September there were sold and delivered 21,976 Ford cars. This was a gain of 11,479 cars over September 1913. This is significant not only because it shows that the Ford production is rapidly being increased to meet the stupendous influx of orders, but also because it demonstrates that the Ford Motor Company is maintaining the 300,000 car-schedule necessary to give Ford purchasers between August 1st, 1914 and August 1st, 1915, a share of Ford profits.

We have just received a car-load of the new 1915 models, and can give you immediate delivery. There's nothing to gain by waiting, so order now and enjoy your car this fall and winter.
